HERNANDEZ TRIAL SET TO BEGIN OCT. 6

Under advisement. Despite attorneys for the former Patriots' star trying to have murder charges against him dropped, the judge on Monday set a date for trial, which is expected to last two months. Evidence in question. A legal expert said the request exposed the case as "weak and circumstantial." ROGER LUSSIER

Bold Bostonians. As part of Metro's ongoing Q&A series featuring interesting people in Boston, we sat down with pedicab driver Roger Lussier to learn more about what it's like to cart 900 pounds around the city's crazy streets.

PEDAL TO THE METAL

Thirty-one-year-old Roger Lussier loves his city. Luckily for him, he gets to spend his day boasting about it to tourists, rubbing elbows with its residents and taking in the city's iconic sights – all while working on his undoubtedly impressive glutes. Since 2010, the affable Allston resident and Boston University alumni has put in thousands of hours peddling for Boston Pedicab. As part of Metro's Bold Bostonians series, Lussier shared the tricks of his trade and tips for pedicab-wary passengers.

What exactly is a pedicab?
It's a 21-speed mountain bike attached to a fiber-glass tub with a padded seat on it.
A lot of people call it a lot of different things. A rickshaw is actually not the correct term, but it has become an Americanized way of describing a pedicab. A rickshaw is technically the cabs you pull as you run. The running ones aren't as common in America.

How did you get into the biz?
My friend was one of the original six pedicabbers. He'd been doing it for five years, and told me about an opportunity. I was a bartender at Our House West, which closed. I was jobless, and he knew I knew the city really well. Being a pedicab driver is similar to bartending in a lot of ways because it's about creating a relationship with the person. I've had people hop on my pedicab and just want to talk.

What's it like navigating the often cranky streets of Boston?
It's one of those things where when I'm riding a bike I kind of give a side eye to pedestrians, and when I'm driving I don't want to deal with bikes. People who drive in the city respond well if you're communicative; if you're making eye contact and using hand signals, or waving and pointing. I think that's why I've managed to ride so far without out any accidents.

How do you usually get their attention?
Depends on what part of the city we're in. Sometimes just yelling "pedicab rides here!" works out pretty well. We'll say, "open fare rides" or "pay what you want rides." You kind of establish your own technique, and as long as you're not bumming out all the other pedicab drivers with your technique, it works well.

Speaking of fares, how much does it cost to catch a ride?
We have an open-fare system, which allows a give and take. What I've started saying in the last few years is, "Pay me what you think I've earned." I found people respond pretty well to that. Some hop on and have an idea of what they expect. Hopefully, I exceed that idea through my knowledge of sports and the city itself, with my sense of humor and, hopefully, my driving ability. I always ask them, "What was it worth to you?"

Boston Pedicab

The company, which debuted in 2005, offers three-wheeled entertainment, tours and simple rides throughout most of Boston proper.

- Passengers can hail a pedicab or call ahead for quick service.
- Groups of 10 or more can book "party rides" to and from special events, or can make the rowdy ride a special event in itself.
- The pedicabs are designed to hold no more than three adults.
- Boston Pedicab is a "pay as you please" service with no set charges for distance or location.

Visit Metro.us to read more about Roger Lussier or other Bold Bostonian interviews.

Do you encounter a lot of drunks?
I don't recall picking up anyone too obnoxious. I had a drunk guy once ask me, "If I can get that girl to get into the pedicab with me, can I get the ride for free?" and I'm like, "Well, you don't have a chance, so sure!"

Do you think people overlook pedicabs as an alternative way to get around the city?
I think that a lot of people who turn us down don't realize that the open fare is actually the way that we operate. I think that's probably the most common misconception. I'd also say other people think that we'd be slower than other ways of getting around – some people actually think we'd be slower than walking. That's not true.

Quoted

"I had a drunk guy once ask me, 'If I can get that girl to get into the pedicab with me, can I get the ride for free?' and I'm like, 'Well you don't have a chance, so sure!'" Lussier

What makes a pedicabber good at his or her job?
You have to be outgoing, know the city really well, think on your feet both with the way you're navigating directions and traffic and also with what you're saying to your passengers. You have to be considerate, knowledgeable and friendly. People like when you project a positive vibe. I find that a smile and being able to relate to someone is key. I'd also argue that since some passengers are not always good at making conversation, you have to read them. Sometimes it's clear they just do not want to chitchat.

Is it difficult to carry, er, particularly overweight people?
That question comes up a lot, but honestly it's never an issue. It's just a matter of putting the bike in the right gear. The weight limit on a pedicab is about 900 pounds. You don't need to be as strong as most people think, but you should definitely be in some semblance of shape. By the way, we've got some ladies, and I'd argue that the women who pedicab are even stronger than the men.

It seems that you and your fellow pedicabbers have quite a camaraderie.
They are like brothers and sisters to me in many ways. That's what keeps me coming back – the community. We go out, and we have the time of our lives.

In court. Hernandez lawyers want Lloyd murder charge dropped

Citing a lack of evidence, attorneys for former Patriots star Aaron Hernandez on Monday asked a judge to throw out a charge that the 24-year-old shot and killed a Dorchester man last June.

Associate Justice Susan Garsh said she would take the motion under advisement, but ruled that the trial tied to the alleged murder of Odin Lloyd will begin on Oct. 6 and would likely last up to two months.

Defense attorneys argued that prosecutors have not produced evidence tying Hernandez to the crime, nor have they shown a motive.

But prosecutors Monday fired back, claiming that they can indeed link Hernandez to the murder, and said his alleged involvement in other shootings showed "a common plan or pattern."

Last month, Hernandez pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder and other related charges in the drive-by shooting deaths of Daniel de Abreu, 28, and Safiro Furtado, 29, who were killed in Boston's South End in July 2012.

Suffolk University law professor Chris Dearborn, a former defense attorney, believes it is "highly unlikely" Garsh will allow the motion to dismiss the murder charge.

But the defense's request exposed how "weak and fundamentally circumstantial" the evidence is, Dearborn said.

"The fact that they even had a viable motion to dismiss the charge speaks volumes about the difficulties the Commonwealth has in proving the case," he said.

Hernandez's lawyers on Monday also asked Garsh to suppress surveillance footage from his home.

Garsh said she would rule on the motions at a later date.

Assault arraignment

Also during Monday's court hearing, Hernandez pleaded not guilty to allegedly attacking a handcuffed inmate and threatening to kill a guard and the guard's family at the Bristol County House of Correction in Dartmouth.

- In February, a witness told TMZ that Hernandez "beat the guy up pretty good."

Cops hurt in cruiser crash

Two Boston police officers transporting a prisoner were injured in a crash Monday afternoon. The crash occurred about 3:20 p.m. at the intersection of Melnea Cass Boulevard and Massachusetts Avenue. Both officers and a prisoner were taken to a hospital. Police said they were not sure how many other cars were involved, but at least one other car was seen with front-end damage. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Violent attack

Man pleads not guilty to assault on woman in Chelsea

A Chelsea man on Monday pleaded not guilty to violently attacking a woman who was found badly beaten in Chelsea early Sunday.

Manuel Marroquin, 26, was charged with armed assault with intent to murder and aggravated assault and battery. He was ordered held on $100,000 bail, the Suffolk district attorney's office said.

Authorities alleged that Marroquin told police he believed a 29-year-old woman he just met and brought to his apartment stole his laptop. He allegedly hit her with a metal pipe and carried her outside to leave her near another home. METRO

Charges in crash that killed student

Driver cited. A Simmons College student out for a jog on Sunday was killed.

The driver who police say hit and killed a Boston college student who was out jogging was driving with a suspended license and speeding, authorities said.

Jeffrey Bickoff, 44, of Sharon, was charged by police on Monday for motor vehicle homicide, driving with a suspended license, speeding and a marked lanes violation. Sharon Police said on Monday that they had probable cause to charge Bickoff.

Haley Cremer, a student at Simmons College, was killed in the crash.

The crash occurred just before 4:30 p.m. on Hampton Road in Sharon near the intersection with Dogwood Road, according to the Norfolk district attorney's office.

Cremer / FACEBOOK

"Initial investigation indicates that the 20-year-old young woman may have been out for a run in the late afternoon," the district attorney's office said.

Family members were with her after she was taken to Norwood Hospital, the district attorney's office said.

Strong student

Cremer was a member of the Class of 2016 at Simmons and was a 2012 graduate of Sharon High, her Facebook page shows.

- She was on track to earn her doctorate in physical therapy.
- Sarah Neill, the college's vce president for Student Affairs and dean of Student Life, sent a letter to the school community on Monday.
- "She was a very strong student, beloved by her faculty and peers, and a Simmons Hall community member, where she cultivated many strong friendships," Neill wrote. "She had a passion for fitness which was most recently reflected in a service learning project where she developed a successful 5K run in April."

MBTA tightens cell phone policy

Bus, train and trolley operators will now be automatically fired for having a phone or similar electronic device anywhere onboard a vehicle while on duty, according to a new MBTA policy order.

Drivers may not even hand their devices over to be temporarily held by anyone else aboard the vehicle, the order said.

The T's previous policy called for automatic termination for any operator found using a cell phone, and a 10-day suspension for possession of a device.

"It's absolutely essential that we do everything we can to help ensure that each customer's trip is a safe one," said T general manager Beverly Scott. METRO

Federal ban

Obama to sign order barring discrimination against gays

President Barack Obama will sign an executive order barring federal contractors from discriminating on the basis of sexual orientation or gender identity, a White House official said.

The White House has been pressing Congress to pass legislation to ban employment discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people and has resisted issuing an executive order in favor of pursuing a broader, legislative solution. But Obama has spent the year taking executive action on other domestic priorities where Congress has failed to make legislative headway, and activists have pressed him to do the same on gay rights.

An F/A-18 takes off from a U.S. aircraft carrier. / GETTY IMAGES

The United States said it could launch air strikes and act jointly with its arch-enemy Iran to support the Iraqi government, after a rampage by Sunni Islamist insurgents across Iraq that has brought accusations of war crimes.

Militants from the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) have routed Baghdad's army and seized the north of the country in the past week, threatening to dismember Iraq and unleash all-out sectarian warfare with no regard for national borders. The fighters have been joined by other armed Sunni groups who oppose what they say is oppression by Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki, a Shi'ite.

The United Nations human rights chief said forces allied with ISIL had almost certainly committed war crimes by executing hundreds of noncombatant men.

Kanye, the family man

This is a version of Kanye West we really, really like. Kim Kardashian posted this picture of her husband and daughter on Instagram on Father's Day, which was also North West's birthday. It's nice to see a different side of Kanye than the weirdo ranting away on stage about crazy stuff like he'll be "going after Shakespeare and Walt Disney" (yup, he said that at Bonnaroo Music and Arts Festival on Friday). Sleeping should be your new thing, Kanye! LASSE E. KRISTIANSEN

Talking point

Stewart courting Moore for BFF

Kristen Stewart has her sights set on Demi Moore as a co-star and potential new BFF, according to Star magazine. "Kristen is making serious noise about befriending Demi, whom she has worshiped for years, and convincing her they should play a mother-daughter team in a new action-comedy," a source says, explaining that Stewart thinks a film pairing "will help both their careers and somewhat depressing public images." And it'll help her attain a lifelong dream. "It's been a long-held dream of Kristen's to star in a movie with Demi," the source says.

Kidman may have had implants

Nicole Kidman made quite an impression on the red carpet at the Swisse Celebrate Life Ball in Melbourne, donning a Prada gown with a plunging neckline, and some are saying the Oscar-winning actress was showing off some newly enlarged assets. "It appears she has had a pretty impressive breast augmentation. I suspect that she has gone from a big A or small B to a full C [cup size]," Dr. Anthony Youn, who has not treated Kidman, tells Radar Online. "Overall I think it looks good, although maybe a touch overdone. It's also possible she still has some swelling."

Paltrow consciously re-coupling with Martin?

Gwyneth Paltrow and Chris Martin seem to be consciously undoing their decision to consciously uncouple, as the duo is reportedly working things out, according to the Daily Mirror. "Chris still lives with her, they are amazingly lovey-dovey together and she still wears her wedding ring. They may have consciously uncoupled a few months ago, but they seem to be recoupling now. No one will be surprised if they get back together," a source tells the paper. "It's true they had problems, but in the weirdest way this 'conscious uncoupling' situation has relieved the pressure on them."

COURTNEY MAUM SPLITS HER TIME LIVING IN NEW YORK CITY, PARIS AND THE BERKSHIRES. COLIN LANE

Summer's hottest book is no beach read

Fiction. Courtney Maum's novel is one of the buzziest of the beach read season — but it's not fluff.

It all started with a note taped on the outside of a French art gallery. The note read (in French), "Mr. Architect, you were wearing an elegant hat and you wanted to buy the blue bear. Please contact me." Courtney Maum was living in Paris at the time and experiencing years of writer's block, but that one note sparked the idea for her new extremely buzz-y novel, "I Am Having So Much Fun Here Without You."

The protagonist is a British artist named Richard who paints rooms as they appear through a keyhole, but he is more obsessed with pining over his ex-mistress than his art — or his wife. He starts regretting his affair about the same time his wife is done with him. "In my family history, everyone cheated on everyone else and got divorced. I found myself wondering, 'Did anyone try to work it out?'" Maum tells us.

Because the book addresses infidelity, early readers are trying to pull marital lessons from these fictional characters. "I'm pretty flattered by that," Maum says. "Marriage is freaking awkward. You're not psyched after eight years to get into bed with the same person."

Maum says she wrote as if she were sitting there with Richard and his wife in the kitchen, with the baby upstairs: "I wrote with my heart," she says. That's probably why, as a reader, you can't help but root for Richard — despite his many flaws.

That's not to say that creating a balanced character who was funny, dark and likable all at the same time was easy for Maum.

"When I wrote the first version, I got a lot of rejection letters," she says. "All the editors thought Richard was too unlikable. At first I just thought they just weren't risk-takers, but when I read the manuscript again 10 years later, I realized they were right."

Meet Brenton Thwaites. The young star of the indie sci-fi mystery 'The Signal' will soon be everywhere

"The Signal" is really two films: a sci-fi thriller and a study of youth and heartbreak. In it, a recently dumped MIT freshman (Brenton Thwaites) is knocked out while tracking down a hacker and wakes up in a strange underground contamination center. There, he struggles to find out where he is and how he might escape.

For Thwaites, it felt like two separate movies. "We shot [the contamination center sections] first," the young Australian actor recalls. "Toward the end of shooting, it was a relaxed road trip vibe. There was no huge crew. It was such a different world from shooting in these long hallways and very brightly lit rooms."

Other parts were filmed in the New Mexico desert. Shooting in suffocating heat might fatigued most actors, but Thwaites, oddly, was used to it. After shooting in America, he did a film in the desert in Australia, then one in Africa.

Besides, the desert has its perks. "It actually makes it easier, because you don't have to create [a character's emotions] so much," he says. He says the film he's shooting now in Australia is mostly digital. "There's nothing here. There's no environment. It's all blue screen and pretending to look at things. In the desert, you really feel oppressed; you feel heavy. You feel tired. When you're tired, certain emotions are more available."

Thwaites had other physical traits to work through. His character has a muscular disease that has crippled his legs, requiring the actor to use crutches. "There was one night I went out in my crutches to try and get a feel for how the character would move. Later on I went to the gym to run. And people would be like, 'Come on, this guy's a phony.'"

But although he only used crutches for part of the film, it still affected his characterization. "The feeling of not being able to do anything slowly depresses you," he says, which suited the character. MATT PRIGGE

The facts

Brenton Thwaites

- Where you've seen him: He played Prince Phillip in "Maleficent" and Tim in "Oculus." Back home in Australia he was on the TV shows "SLIDE" and "Home and Away."
- Where he is now: Headlining the low-budget sci-fi thriller "The Signal"
- Where he will be: With Jeff Bridges and Meryl Streep in "The Giver," out in August; in "Son of a Gun," with Ewan McGregor; in Helen Hunt's "Ride"; and starring in the $150 million "Gods of Egypt" with Gerard Butler and Geoffrey Rush

Babymoon. Enjoy a cool British garden rather than sweltering on a beach this summer.

Blooming bellies and flowers

Stop and smell something rarer than a rose. / GETTY IMAGES. ALL OTHER PHOTOS JANET CHOI, METRO

Stacy Keibler, George Clooney's former flame, recently Instagrammed a photo with the caption: "Sun, sand and serenity — the perfect #babymoon." Indeed! Basking in the heat and humidity 30 weeks pregnant and 20 pounds heavier, beads of sweat accompanying your labored breathing — wait, that sounds awful. Meditative garden strolls on occasionally overcast days, topped off with comforting cups of herbal tea? That's more like it, and that's what you'll find in England.

Like motherhood, gardening is about cultivating life, and there are no bigger gardening aficionados than the English. This is obvious every May when, as it has for the last 101 years, the RHS Chelsea Flower Show comes to London. Fortunately, you don't have to know a thing about gardening to enjoy the breathtaking temporary displays or the permanent gardens on the hospital grounds. Can't get to London in May? RHS, the Royal Horticultural Society (www.rhs.org.uk), has four gardens you can visit year-round. The one closest to the capital, RHS Garden Wisley, showcases exotic species.

A few hours to the north, in Yorkshire, is the RHS Garden Harlow Carr. Stroll through time, with gardens representing a particular era or season. Time-traveling can be exhausting, but fortunately, Bettys (www.bettys.co.uk) is on hand to offer sandwiches, baked goods and cups of that liquid comfort. When night falls, sleep soundly at Wood Hall Hotel & Spa (www.handpickedhotels.co.uk), an English country manor that predictably exudes an air of refinement. The stuffed toy badger in your room, however, prevents you from mistakenly thinking that you're anywhere stuffy. Don't forget the spa, where a pregnancy massage or facial beckons.

When you've had your fill of flowers, England has no shortage of destinations steeped in history, including Windsor Castle, Hatfield House and the walled city of York. After stopping to smell the roses, you should be sufficiently relaxed and ready to tackle motherhood.

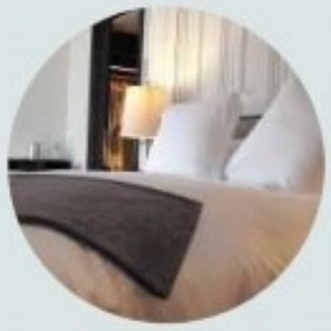
Staying in London

Rosewood London



For five-star treatment in a five-star building, look no further than Rosewood London. Less than a year old, the UK outpost of the luxury hotel group cuts no corners when it comes to service, beautifully appointed accommodations and top-notch dining. As it's your last hurrah, splurge on one of the 44 suites. "Home away from home" is only apt if your actual home has a marble bathroom, the most comfortable bed in the world and a butler, however. The hotel's Sense Spa offers a prenatal massage that puts the mother-to-be in a zenlike state, one that will be all too rare soon.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Being too rigid will alienate you from your peers. Try to be a little more flexible so you can stay on the good side of your colleagues.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. You may daydream about exotic destinations — but, in reality, experiencing cultural events in your own community will bring you just as much enjoyment. Explore your neighborhood.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. You need to realistically examine your financial situation and do whatever it takes to protect your interests. Failing to keep on top of agreements, contracts or legal matters could land you in debt.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Compromise, not conflict, will be the order of the day. You will lose an important ally if you are too argumentative or demanding. Be willing to meet halfway.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Your current job may be falling short of your expectations. Improving your work situation should be your main focus. Do some networking to find a more suitable position.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Don't get involved in any power struggles today. If everyone does their own thing, there will be less opportunity for discord and disagreements. Spend time with someone who shares your ideas.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Listen and offer solutions to friends, relatives or colleagues who need someone to confide in, but don't be too quick to share your secrets.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Protect yourself by doing extensive research before making a radical career move. If you act on false information, you could undo all the progress you have made so far.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Experience is a great teacher, so consider past successes and failures before you make a move. Keeping your emotions under control will prevent you from making an ill-advised choice.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Don't let a shortage of funds hold you back. Others think highly of your talents and will support your efforts, so believe in your assets and capabilities.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Dare yourself to try something new. You will become inspired if you choose to do things that are unfamiliar to you. Take the plunge. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Knowledge of orientation is serious

Re: 'Some things should really just stay personal' (Metro, June 13-16) To reader C.M. Parns: If you had read the article ["I'm proud of who I am," Metro, June 10], you'd see exactly why it's important for people like Jennifer Lydon to "inform" us that transgendered people exist. When Lydon was 11, she read a similar piece about Renee Richards and realized she wasn't alone in the world. That article changed her life. Very likely there are young people today who have been given hope from Lydon's piece.

And as for his complaint about why people have to "announce" they're gay, it's no different than Kim and Kanye or Selena and Justin "announcing" they're straight. To a gay teen with few role models, it certainly is "that damn serious." Parns is the one who needs to get over himself. What he considers intrusive is really just the reporting of reality.

RICHARD FEINBERG, VIA EMAIL

Everyone should get their say in the matter

Re: 'Some things should really just stay personal' (Metro, June 13-16) Bravo to letter writer C.M. Parns for saying exactly what I was thinking! I'm pleading the First Amendment in saying that this whole bisexual, transgender and homosexual revolution has gotten way out of control. Are people really that tired of human life that they feel the need to just change their sexual orientation on a whim if they don't like it? If supporters of these movements are allowed to rub it in the face of everyone else, then we who feel differently should be allowed to voice our opinion as well. Maybe if it looks like a duck and quacks like a duck, it's really a dog or cat instead.

John Brooks celebrates what turned out to be the game-winning goal for the United States over Ghana on Monday in Brazil. / LAURENCE GRIFFITHS, GETTY IMAGES

Americans stun Ghana early, late

World Cup. The U.S. won its first match in the Brazil tournament, 2-1, over rival Ghana.

There was early excitement, late dejection and late exuberance for the U.S. men's soccer team Monday in Brazil, but after 90 minutes of draining on-field play, the Americans stood tall, finding sweet revenge over Ghana with a monumental 2-1 World Cup win.

Minutes after Ghana's Andre Ayew scored to nearly lock down a 1-1 tie, John Brooks bounced in a picture-perfect Graham Zusi corner kick off his head and into the net to give the U.S. the lead they would leave with.

If drama was what casual U.S. futbol fans wanted, they got it in the American's opener as Clint Dempsey scored just 31 seconds in. Dempsey's early goal gave way to two U.S. injuries. Dempsey himself was kicked in the face by Ghana's John Boye with the ball in the air, leaving the American star with a bloodied nose. A more long-term issue for the U.S. is the injury that striker Jozy Altidore sustained 20 minutes in when he appeared to pull his hamstring as he looked to gain separation on a break.

American classic

The U.S. defeated Ghana, 2-1, Monday, to move to the top of the Group G standings with Germany. Both the U.S. and Germany are 1-0-0 with three points while Ghana and Portugal are 0-0-1 and hold no points in the "Group of Death."

- Ghana controlled play in between the Americans' bookend goals. It held possession 62 percent of the match and had a whopping 21 shots on goal to the Americans' eight.
- The U.S. men's team will now shift its focus to Portugal (Sunday, 6 p.m., ESPN), its next opponent in Group G play. The Americans play their final Group G match on Thursday, June 26 against Germany (12 p.m., ESPN).
